Seaport – a historical Gem in the Port of Turku from 1899

The protected neo-renaissance building by architect Stefan Michailow is a former warrant warehouse, which means temporary storage of goods subject to customs clearance in the port area. Seaport has served as a hotel since 1986 – now the modern automatic hotel Hiisi Hotel Turku Seaport combines history and modernity.

Seaport has experienced historical moments along its journey, such as the destruction of the wooden warehouse next to the warrant warehouse during the Winter War bombings. A long, two-story brick building was built in its place, which was associated with operations such as the handling of a long-awaited coffee shipment. In addition, the building has experienced partial changes, such as the disappearance of the stairs due to subsidence of the subsoil. One of the most memorable cases is when rising sea water has disturbed hotel guests to the point that the rescue service has evacuated them by rowboat.

Seaport has long operated as a full-service hotel with restaurant services. The entrepreneurs and companies that previously operated the Seaport have cherished the hotel with love, and Hiisi will continue to cherish the Seaport's heritage with heart, with his own modern twist.

The Story of Hiisi Homes

In the autumn of 2017, our founders Ari, Markus and Niklas gathered their “wooden heads” at Kokkokallio in Vihti, surrounded by the splendour of fall colours. They rolled up their sleeves, shook off the dust of the day’s work — and got to it.

Our first temporary home was in Nummela, Vihti. Furnishing that initial apartment was an exhilarating adventure — a far cry from the opening of Hiisi Hotel Turku Seaport in spring 2025, the largest property in Hiisi’s history. Today, nearly 500 doors open across 17 cities in Southern Finland, where Hiisi Homes & Hotels — now joined by Hiisi Hostels — welcome guests who appreciate warm and inviting accommodation.

You won’t spot the Hiisi team on site — but behind the scenes, a dozen or so Hiisi folk are quietly working for you, our dear fellow Hiisi people. We three “wooden heads” are truly grateful for the Hiiden tribe that’s grown around us, and to every tribe member (that is, each one of you).

Yours,

Ari, Markus ja Niklas
